

Head down; hard at work

Sometimes the best candidate is the one who comes in, puts her head down at her cubicle every day and truly wants to do your data entry work. That's Myah, whose long-term goal is an accounting degree but who right now needs full-time income in an office that can use her for a consistent task, even working alone if necessary.

Why is that? She is a college student who needs the money and will work herself through school. She has been doing it already, so you can expect her to continue that reliability by giving you hours even during the school year. Her Excel skills are particularly strong, and her studies have included a concentration in Marketing if that gives you more ideas for how she could be helpful to you!
